

Upper Valley Young Authors' Conference

Meeting and talking with a published writer inspires students. Susan Fletcher, author of several young adult novels, will be featured at the Upper Valley Young Authors' Conference in St. Anthony, Idaho, on Saturday, November 11. Each student who attends will receive an autographed copy of her award winning book, Dragon's Milk. In addition to her keynote address, Fletcher will present a session for teachers and a session for high school students. Young writers will spend a day in invigorating writing workshops with others who care about words. The event ends with an affirming open mike session for students.

If you live within driving range, think about coming over with your students. The cost for the day will be $18.00 per attendee. This is our second young authors' conference, and we're hoping to once again locate teachers from the area to present workshops. We can offer you a $75.00 honorarium to help with gas expenses if you are willing to present your workshop twice. Send an e-mail if you might be willing to help out. We would love to have you—as a presenter or attendee. Contact Bonnie Warne for more information and to be placed on the mailing list: bonniew@sd215.k12.id.us

We hope you can schedule it in. Have a great start to your school year!
